White Brave's Heritag"-Today's Big

Feature.

Heading the bill of unusually strong pictures at the Breed today is the thrilling story of frontier life in the early pioneer days, entitled White Brave's Heritage." The story tells of a sturdy pioneer, who is called from his fireside to ght the prairie fire, and returns to not that his little son has been stolen by the Indians during his remaining away over night. The frantle mother, is helpless, in the face of the rekskins, and all efforts to locate the child are fruitless. Fifteen years later, the boy, who has been kept in captivity by the Indians, has grown to sturdy manhood, so much resembling his father. He is called White Brave as he is so fearless in his hunting, and one day his band secures a glimpse of a passing prairie schooner, and all attack it, killing overy member, and burning the wagon, then discovering a little girl, who has hidden inside the schooner. She is large for her age, and White Brave is quite smitten with her, but the Chief also desires her, and makes her fine gifts, preparatory to claiming her. In a fierce tight later, White Brave snatches her from her captor, and both rush to the thicket. They are followed by the maddened indians, and captured, and would have been promptly killed but for another passing caravan of pioneers, who it was discovered was headed by White Brave's old father. The identification and the happiness of the stalwart son, in finding his own father, is one of the most charming portions of this great and picturesque picture.

Coming for Monday and Tuesday only, is the Biograph's strongest release of the year, and is entitled The Battle.

one should miss this great treat, No one should miss this great treat, for it is without doubt a magnificent story of beautiful and brilliant solciery. It deals with a young northern officer who loves a northern girl, she being in the south in the interest of the charity commission, but when he seems the smell of powder and is forced into the thickest of the action, he weakens, and returns to the place where his sweetheart lives. Shortly the whistling bombs and shricking camen where his sweetheart ilves. Shortly the whistling bombs and shricking cannon bespeak the nearness of the enemy, and the wounded colonel is brought into the girl's apartment. The frightened lover walts outside the window until he hears the colonel's orders and, finding that no one can be secured to pass through the firing line to secure the ammunition wagon, determines of the limited hardous plece of work must be left to be seen and not spoll the grand denouement.
